Despite the hard luck which pursued oakhawn this year in the way of bad weather, and of the big fire, which naturally made the track run for several days at a complete loss, the investment proved profitable, if the first meeting affords any criterion.

John Condon, one of the chief owners of the plant, said that despite adverse conditions, and regardless of the fact that the rain turned the track into a perfect quasmire for a part of the meet, the attendance was entirely satisfactory, and would justify the owners of the plant in putting more improvements into the grounds until they represented the investment of half a million dollars.
